Call for Papers

Instructions to Authors

1. Manuscripts sent to the editorial committee of the University Library Journal (hereunder referred to as “the Journal”) should be related to issues of academic research as well as practical applications in university librarianship. The Journal is published semi-annually in March and September by the National Taiwan University Library. To determine whether a manuscript fits within the Journal’s scope of interest, please consult recent issues. Any eligible manuscripts are more than welcome.
2. Manuscripts must be neither previously officially published nor simultaneously submitted elsewhere. For a manuscript that has been presented at a conference, please make sure that the conference organizers do not have plans to publish a collection of the conference papers before submitting the manuscript to the University Library Journal. Please also state, at the end of the text, which conference the manuscript was presented at. Manuscripts written either in Chinese or English are acceptable. Each manuscript should be no more than 15,000 characters in Chinese or 8,000 words in English. If any graphs or photos are included in the manuscript, please attach originals.
3. An electronic submission is required. E-mail submissions should be sent to the editor at tulce@ntu.edu.tw. All manuscripts must be one sided, numbered consecutively and submitted in WORD format with references at the end and an abstract of no more than 200 words. The author’s full name, affiliation, and e-mail address should appear on the title page. 3 - 5 keywords should be included. Standard United States English spelling should be used throughout the text. The original phrases for all acronyms and abbreviations should be spelled out in full when first used in the text.
4. The Journal follows Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association published by the American Psychological Association.
5. If materials in the manuscript include other copyrighted works, the author(s) must obtain written permission from the copyright owners and credit the source(s) in the article. The Journal takes no responsibility and assumes no liabilities arising from the author’s violation against national copyright laws.
6. The copyrights of the papers published in the Journal shall still be the entitlement of the authors. Any third party should obtain consent from both the author and the Journal Committee in advance for the right to publish the contents elsewhere.
7. After the manuscript is accepted, the author warrants and authorizes the copyright of his/her works to the Editorial Board of the Journal, the NTU Press, and all other collaborating sectors. By the regulations of the “Copyright License Agreement,” the NTU Library shall have the right to edit, revise/reproduce, translate/interpret, publicly transmit, and reposit works both in print and in e-journal format for users to read, download, and print out. Works will be authorized for the NTU Library to publish in both print and e-publication form for the promotion of academic research.
8. The Journal is also published in electronic format. Accepted papers will be included in the Publications website after authorization is obtained from authors (<http://univj.lib.ntu.edu.tw/>), and will also be included in the NTU Database of Academic Periodicals (<http://ejournal.press.ntu.edu.tw/>).
9. Manuscripts are evaluated using a double blind reviewing process by scholars and experts appointed by the Journal Editorial Committee to decide whether or not they will be accepted for publication.
10. Once the paper is published in the Journal, an honorarium will be set in accordance to the standards of the National Taiwan University and the Journal. The required amount of tax as stipulated by the R.O.C. government will be deducted. In addition to the honorarium, the Journal Committee will also give the author, for each published paper, two copies of the Journal for free.
